A zero-hour contract is a type of contract between an employer and a worker, where the employer is not obliged to provide any minimum working hours, while the worker is not obliged to accept any work offered. The employee may sign an agreement to be available for work as and when required, so that no particular number of hours or times of work are specified.

2013 July 6, "The rise of smart beta", in The Economist, volume 408, number 8843, page 68: Investors face a quandary. Cash offers a return of virtually zero in many developed countries; government-bond yields may have risen in recent weeks but they are still unattractive. Equities have suffered two big bear markets since 2000 and are wobbling again.

It is my belief that hard drives could be the future of domestic audio. They've been in the wings long enough for early adopters to have little interest in HDCD, SACD & DVD-A, knowing the future lies elsewhere. It is time the music industry woke up & smelled the coffee. When my sons (aged 10 &12 ...
